

Edgewater Postal Continuity Plan

A Cost-Neutral Alternative to Long-Term Tax Borrowing

This plan proposes a practical, low-cost solution to maintain uninterrupted postal service in Edgewater without creating a new tax-funded “Commercial Space Service.” By leasing a temporary ATCO-style modular building, Canada Post can continue operations locally while eliminating the need for a 15-year borrowing commitment and protecting taxpayers from unnecessary exposure.

Financial Model (Updated and Conservative)

Item	Estimated Monthly Cost	Notes
ATCO-style trailer lease	$1,000	Standard modular office rate including delivery and set
Utilities (electricity, heating, insurance, phone, internet)	$800	Conservative estimate
Municipal/site fees, snow clearing, maintenance	$400	Includes winter servicing and site access
Total Estimated Monthly Cost	$2,200	≈ $26,400 annually

Funding source: Canada Post’s existing lease payment for the current (condemned) Edgewater post office building — paid via a CPAA (Canadian Postmasters and Assistants Association) payment to the local postmaster — can be redirected to cover these operating costs.

Taxpayer exposure: $0.00 — all expenses are absorbed within Canada Post’s existing budget for local postal operations.

Comparative Benefits

Aspect	ATCO-Lease Plan	RDEK Borrowing Model
Public cost	None	$450,000 debt + 15 years of taxation
Timeline	6–8 weeks	18–24 months minimum
Risk	Shared with Canada Post	All risk on taxpayers
Flexibility	Lease can end anytime	Fixed 15-year loan
Governance	Local or nonprofit lease	RDEK-controlled asset
Ownership	None; zero liability	RDEK asset, taxpayer burden

Conclusion: This plan offers a financially responsible, rapid, and transparent solution to maintain Edgewater’s postal service. It avoids debt, preserves local service, and keeps public decision-making grounded in common sense rather than long-term taxation.
